been referred to many times in England; and some very prominent personages have expressed themselves tavorable to assisting in the work. The change in the commercial relations of England with the Coloniesher free trade policy, which grants no greater favors to Colonial produce than if it were foreign-and the still greater change the concession of self-government to the Colonies, under which they tax Imperial industry to the same degree as foreign-has left the expense of protecting them to the Home Government, without the exclusive advantages of their trade or intervention in their local affairs; and has consequently inaugurated a new Colonial policy favorable to their separation-their independence and nationality. This marked change that has occurred through Colonial self-government and the free-trade doctrines of England within the last eighty years, may be most clearly perceived when we call to mind the old Colonial policy under which Pitt declared in the House of Commons that "the Colonies should not be allowed to manufacture so much as a hob-nail." Now they buy and sell where they please, manufacture whatever they wish, and in all respects exercise the prerogatives of nationality, with the exception of making war or concluding treaties of peace. The recent affair of the Trent, however, shows strongly enough that so far as British America is concerned its loyalty is undoubted, and its attachment to the mother country so intense as to render its independence very remote. Nevertheless we observe by our English exchanges that Mr. Goldwin Smith, Professor of History at Oxford, has lately delivered himself of an essay, in which he takes the position that the time has come for England to set the Colonies free, or, to use his language, "fence them round with the majesty of an independent nation." He deems Colonial dependence to be incompatible with self-governing Colonies and free trade. Beyond newspaper criticism, the effects of the Mr. Smith's advanced ideas are not likely soon to be seen. Still the idea of a separation of the Colonies from the mother country has taken such a hold on Imperial statesmen that they regard it as an event that must sooner or later occur; and are consequently shaping Imperial policy so that when the time arrives it may be done without resorting to rebellion, but be done peacefully. At a recent dinner given in London to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the foundation of the Australian Celonies, there were a host of eminent persons present, among whom were Lord Stanly, Lord Clarence Paget, Sir John Pakington, Lord Elcho, and last but not least the Colonial Secretary, the Duke of Newcastle. Occasion was taken by the latter nobleman to express his views of the colo-

would pursue in case British America or Australia asked for nationality. It is a great tribute to the enlightened doctrine of self-government, though it is antithetically opposed to the coercive principles now being enforced by the Northern States in respect to the Slave States. When British statesmen hold such views respecting the Colonial dependencies of the Crown, it surely need not be surprising if British journals and the British people should lavor a peaceful separation of the Southern States from the Union. It is however, nothing but an enlightened recognition of the great docrine of self-government that where sectional differences and sectional interests retard the prospecity of a country, it is wisest to have recourse to a peaceful separation of a nation rather than resort hopelessly to force to overcome obstacles interposed by nature itself. rather than resort hopelessly to force to overcome obstacles interposed by nature itself.
The lesson learned by England by the revolt of the Old Colonies has not been lost. She has seen her offspring become one of the mightnest nations of the earth. She feels that her great mission is to become the mother of nations; that her colonies, widely mother of nations; that her colonies, which is separated from her, will in the course of time don the insignia of nationality, and that it is her duty rather to aid their natural development by peaceable concessions than immortalize their birth by shedding frati-

The Duke of Newcastle, in the course of his speech at the celebration referred to, strongly denounced the democratic tendency of the colonies, and in a review of it, the European Times holds the following opinions:

The sole exception to the excellence of the Duke's speech is to be found in the earnest and solemn way in which he denounced the democracy of the Colonies, and the introduction into some of the Australian graph of what he considered equivalent to manhood suffrage. Sir John Packington was weak enough to follow the Duke into this labyring the burter Stanley, the representative of an eder particles (annity the actine, had skill and judgment enough to avoid it. This construct the construction of democracy in the Colonies, is divisions, in which the pupils are arranges according to their age and the progress they make in their studies.

The first division comprehends children of from six to eight years old, and their education consists of religious lessons, reading, writing and the elements of arithmetic.

The second division comprehends children from eight to ten years old, and their education consists of the study of the Holy Scriptures, a continuation of their former exercises in reading, writing and arithmetic and in French Grammar.

The third division comprehends children from ten years old and upwards, and their education compress the study of the Christian dectrines, a continuation of their former exercises in reading, writing, arithmetic and French grammar and instruction in the elements of geography and history, particularly of the geography and history, particularly of the geography and history of France, and in music and linear drawing.

No books are allowed to be used in these schools but such as are authorized by the Government; but the masters are permitted to follow the method of instruction which they themselves think preferable.

What security is there to the public that the 5. What security is more to the children are properly taught? In order that the schools may be duy inspected two local committees are appointed, one of the arrondissement and one of the commune.

The committee of the arrondissement is specially The committee of the arrondissement is specially engaged in the superintendence of primary schools. It consists of the mayor of the chief town in the arrondissement, of the juge de paix, the cure, a minister of each of the reognized seets, a professor, a primary schoolmaster, three members of the council of the arrondissement, and the members of the council general of the department who live within the arrondissement.

The committee of the commune consists of the mayor of the commune, the president, the cure or pastor, and one of the most influential persons of the arrondissement.

These committees meet at least once a month. The communal or local committee inspects the condition and progress of the schools in the commune, and it reports to the committee of the arrondissement. This latter committee has the right of examining all the schools of the arrondissement. Some one of its members is generally present at each local examination and it reports to the Minister of Public Instruction on the state and progress of the education of the arrondissement.

progress of the education of the arrondissement.
But besides the local inspection, there is another system of general inspection directed by the Minister of Public Instruction. An inspector is appointed for every department in France and the principal inspector is assisted by one or two subinspectors as the urgency of the circumstances may require. The duty of the inspectors is to examine the primary schools of their several departments and to report to the Minister of Public Instruction:

Upon the state of the school house and classes.

2. Upon the moral character of the school.

3. Upon the instruction given and the methods followed by the schoolmaster.

The inspectors are further required to visit the Normal schools and to inform the authorities of anything wrong in their management, and once a year to report to the prefets of their several departments on the condition and progress of education in the schools of the departments. I may also state that every school is examined twice a year and a list is made out of the names of all the pupils in order of merit, and is fixed upon the walls of the school where it remains until the next examination.

nobleman to express his views of the colonies and colonial policy, and in doing so expressed himself entirely in favor of emancipating the colonies from the nominal control of the Home Government whenever they demanded it. His words were:

"If any colony wished to separate from us—if they thought their strength was sufficient to allow them to stand alone — we should not seek to restrain them. Those days were long past. But he believed that the present attachment between Great Britain and her colonies was such that it would be a long day ere the union between them was severed, or ought to be severed on either side."

Such language from a Cabinet Minister leaves little doubt as to the course England would pursue in case British America or Australia asked for nationality. It is a great tribute to the enlightened doctrine of self-government, though it is antithetically opposed to the coercive principles now being the self-government, though it is antithetically opposed to the coercive principles now being at the same time so screened as to prevent accident. In view of the many real trage-dies on the stage here, the new plan is dethe serving of trial.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—The treatment pursued by Professor Holloway for the cure of wounds and ulcers is the most simple and certain in its effects, it has been tried by hundreds of thousands, and never been known to fail; by the administration of an internal remedy (the Pills.) he drives disease out, and by the administration of an external remedy (the Ointment.) he heals wounds, ulcers, and the worst of external disorders. By this celebrated treatment, also, bad legs, and ulcers, are cured, even when they have been upwards of twenty years standing.

May-Day Parade of the Firemen.

The Third May-Day Parade of the Victoria Fire Department came off yesterday and was attended with that complete success which has marked the efforts of our firemen throughout every under-taking of the kind in which they have engaged. The day was beautifully cool and pleasant, and just enough of sunlight forced its way though a thin veil of hazy clouds to render the weather delightfully cool and pleasant and peculiarly adapted for the purposes of a parade. At an early hour the work of decorating the fire apparatus and houses commenced, and crowds of ladies and gentlemen gathered at the street corners to witness the turn-out. The decorations were numer-ous, handsome and appropriate. From the Tiger Engine House to a building on the opposite side of Johnson street were suspended English, American, French and German flags, and from the staff upon the engine house waved the company's ensign. The Deluge Engine Company, at an early flung to the breeze from the pole a new and beautiful company ensign, and suspended across the street were the fings of several nations. From the Union Hook and Ladder Company's staff waved the company ensign, and from a line ex-tending to the Police Barracks several large flags were suspended. But few of the business houses were pened during the day, and a general holi-day seemed to have been tacitly agreed on. The Tigers, as the inviting company, were selected as escort, and Mr. Samuel L. Kelly, their energetic foreman, was appointed marshal of the day.

The Tiger and Deluge Companies next marched to the House of Union Hook and Ludder Company, on Bastion street, where that organization with their apparatus fell in. The Unions numbered 35 men; were led by five stalwart axemen, or pioneers, and apparated in red shirts, black panis, leathern belts, and New York fire hats. The Truck was handsomely decorated with wreaths of flowers and evergreen, and within a handsome arch or canopy sat a young led attired in the uniform of the company. In the centre of the rope appeared a yacant hand-strap to which was attached a mourning wreath. This was in memorizing of the late William Walls, who was a prominent member of the organization. The officers of the Company are: D. A. Edgar, Fo eman; C. Halsey, First Assistant Foreman; Murray Thain, Second Assistant Foreman.

After leaving the Truck House, the fireman proceeded down Bastion to Wharf street, along Wharf to Yates, where Mr. Dickson, the Chief Engineer, and Mr. Malowinsky, his efficient Assistant, were received and escorted to their place in the line. The procession then continued on up Yates to Government, Government to Pandora, Pandora to Douglas, Douglas to Yates, Yates to Government and across James' Bridge to the Government Buildings. Additional from Stickeen

The schooner Explorer, 26 days from the mouth of Stickeen River, came into the harbor yesterday. The weather at Stickeen when the schooner left was intensely cold. A letter to Mr. Dechent, gardener of this A letter to Mr. Dechent, gardener of this city, from a friend at Stickeen River, says that the prospectors had had trouble with two or three drunken Indians who threatened to destroy the cances. No violence was attempted, however, and as the whites were sixty in number and well armed, none was feared. The writer further says that he had prospected for gold at the mouth of the Stickeen and obtained several colors to the pan. He is therefore sanguine of finding pan. He is therefore sanguine of finding good diggings when the ice is gone. Choquette and party remained at the mouth of the river with the other prospecters. The schooner Ino had not reached Stickeen when the Explorer left. The letter given below was received by Mr. Thomas Gorrie from a friend who went up in the Explorer: He is therefore sanguine of finding

STICKEEN, ILLIHE, April 4th, 1862.
We arrived at this point on Monday last, and since then have been buying canoes, fixing them up, and moving our traps from the schoner to the shore. We are four miles from the mouth of the Stickeen, and the Indians tell us we cannot get up it for several weeks yet. We have bought a canoe, and have got all our stuff ashore; are camped out in the coldest weather I ever camped out in yet. We cannot dip up a dipper of water but it turns to ice almost immediately, and when we wash our faces, our whiskers are full of ice before we can dry them. We had a rather pleasant trip up, although much crowded. We had a very severe gale in crossing Queen Charlotte's Sound, and some of the passengers thought we were going to Davy Jones' locker. I have seen nothing of the Jno. Macauly at Fort Simpson; heard that she had been there and left, but she has not been here yet.

PHOTOGRAPHIC .- Yesterday morning Mr. Fardon photoghaphed the members of the Union Hook and Ladder Company with their apparatus, as they stood near their house on Bastion street.

RUNAWAY .- Two horses attached to a lumber wagon ran away on Johnson street yesterday morning and nearly ruined the vehicle before a stopper could be put to their fun.

EXPRESSIVE. - The British Columbian, chronicling the arrival of Gov. Douglas at New Westminster, heads the paragraph "Arrival of the Czar!" Rather expressive, and more truthtul than poetic.

RUMOR .- It is stated that an intimation has been received in certain quarters from the Colonial Office, that a change in the Governorship may be anticipated in August.

REAL ESTATE .- Messrs. Franklin will sell at noon to-day, at salesroom, valuable Yates street and other property.

THE CAMELS were brought to town yesterday and are herded in the lot at the corner of Douglas
